Tanay and Chanvi are childhood friends, who are now playing against each other at a chess competition. They have always loved playing chess and learnt new techniques by Practising together. Chanvi would always help Tanay master new techniques, but the same was never reciprocated by Tanay. He believed girls were not good at chess or any other sport. Soon, Chanvi moved away and they met again at a chess competition, which shocked Tanay and triggered him. Chanvi let Tanay win, because it meant a lot to him. Later, she visited him and showed her skill to him. also reminded him of the fun they used to have while playing chess and that is not always a about winning a competition. Tanay Learned to focus on fun and enjoying the game rather than obsessing over winning a game. She also learned not to underestimate anyone.

A Reader

A reader sinks into a story,
Living a thousand lives.
He reads it in all his glory,
Every scene is another dive.

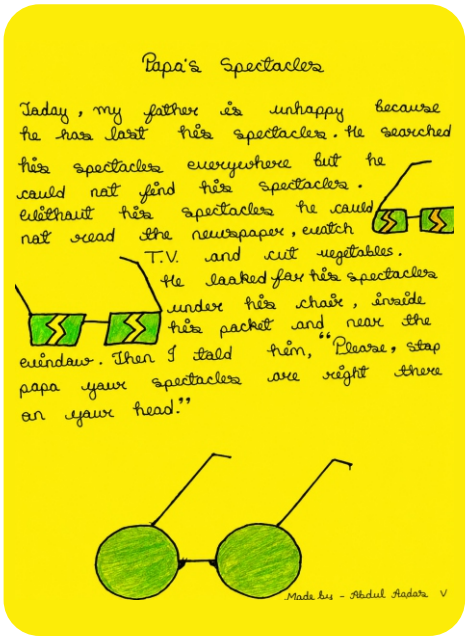

It connects with his true emotions,
Anxiety building up with each turning page.
He carries a sense of deep devotion,
Until, he dies of old age.

He never thinks a story is waste,
He dives deeper as the page turns.
Every meal is one of a taste,
Fire as such is hotter as it burns.

He is a reader,
Reading every scene.
He is a keeper,
Keeping every dream.

Papa's Spectacles

Today, my father is unhappy because he has lost his spectacles. He searched his spectacles everywhere but he could not find his spectacles. Without his spectacles he could not read the newspaper, watch T.V. and cut vegetables. He looked for his spectacles under his chair, inside his packet and near the window. Then I told him, "Please, stop papa your spectacles are right there on your head."
